

Erin Wagner-Wolfe, MPH
Employment Support Program Advisor, DMAS

Erin enjoys being part of the evolution of health care in the United States. Being on the frontlines of this important transition allows her to do what she enjoys most – help people. Her work in health care covers a number of settings, including hospitals, doctor offices, managed care organizations and now a state employee for the Department of Medical Assistance Services. This experience honed her skills to engage with key state partners and stakeholders to reach positive outcomes for Medicaid members throughout Virginia. Her responsibilities at DMAS place her at the forefront of the system-wide change responsible for the development of health plan contract compliance policies and procedures to support high-quality operations in compliance with federal and state regulations working to implement employment supports for individuals that have significant behavioral health and complex health conditions through the High Needs Supports program. Erin has a Bachelor of Science in Health and Physical Education from Virginia State University and Master’s Degree in Public Health from the University of Maryland.
